SCARSDALE'S TAP WINS NATIONAL AND LOCAL ACCOLADES

SCARSDALE, NY (1/22/19) -- Scarsdale-based The Acceleration Project (TAP) continues to gain recognition for the important work it has done to revitalize local economies. Jane Veron, CEO and co-founder of TAP, recently received the national Daily Point of Light Award for her outstanding service work, while TAP earned the Organizational Changemaker Award from the Nonprofit Westchester organization.

TAP's Gone National

Through strategic partnerships with organizations such as JPMorgan Chase and Goldman Sachs, TAP recently extended its reach nationally, serving those who would not otherwise be able to access high quality business consulting services. Through its participation in small business conferences and special events across the U.S., it has established a presence in six states, and 30 cities and towns. Fittingly, Veron's efforts to grow TAP's size and scope have garnered recognition on the national stage.

Veron, who also serves as a Scarsdale Village trustee and a trustee of the Scarsdale Foundation, co-founded TAP in 2012 to harness the talent of women who donate corporate-level business acumen to empower small businesses. The Daily Point of Light award is given each weekday by Points of Light, the world's largest organization dedicated to volunteer service. Founded in 1990 by President George H.W. Bush to recognize individuals creating meaningful change in their communities, the organization grants the awards in both the United States and United Kingdom.

"This award recognizes exceptional individuals who are using their time, talent, voice and treasure to improve the lives of others," said Jaqueline Innocent, vice president, Points of Light Recognition Programs. "These points of light, like Jane Veron, make an impact on individuals while also helping build resilient communities."

Veron spent her career in strategic planning and marketing for Fortune 500 companies, including working as a management consultant at Bain & Company, and a marketing executive at American Express. She also managed her own private consulting business. Today, she donates her skills to assist struggling small business owners, and recruit dozens of similarly qualified women professionals to do the same. Through TAP, volunteers proudly practice and broaden their skills, while smaller, often minority-owned, companies - and the communities where they're located - benefit from solid, professional consulting advice.

THE ACCELERATION PROJECT

“The entire economic landscape had shifted, and I saw that small businesses were getting battered by the Internet,” said Veron. “It pained me to see entrepreneurs who were so dedicated to their product or service struggling to compete. They didn’t necessarily have the business tools to confront it,” she continued. “I knew there was this incredible pool of talent, primarily women who left the workforce to care for families, who had extensive skills and experience. I thought, ‘Why don’t I recruit, train and mobilize these professionals, and have them advise these business owners?’ The Acceleration Project has been successful beyond my wildest dreams. Every day, I wake up energized and excited to do the work I do.”

Maintaining Local Focus

In addition to its work in cities such as Atlanta, Detroit and Philadelphia, TAP actively accelerates Westchester economies by providing strategic advisory services to numerous local clients, most notably women and minorities. It has worked with a myriad of organizations, ranging from restaurants and fine food retailers, to health care service providers and nonprofits.

Last month, TAP was named an “Organizational Changemaker” by Nonprofit Westchester (NPW), a group that provides the county’s nonprofits with a single unified voice for the work they do to support the economic vitality and sustainability within Westchester. In recognizing TAP’s efforts, Nonprofit Westchester cited its positive impacts in the community through innovation and creativity.

"A thriving community doesn't just appear – it is something that the nonprofit sector builds in partnership with individuals, government and business," stated Joanna Straub, NPW executive director. "The blueprint for our success depends on dedicated and knowledgeable leadership willing to enhance reliable programs and direction by encouraging innovative vision and creativity from colleagues at all levels. We are thrilled to recognize that type of changemaker leadership."
